

SURGERY. CLINICAL LECTURES.

By JAMES RUSSEL, Member of Royal College of Surgeons, one of the Surgeons of the Royal Infirmary, and Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh.

THE Course will consist of Practical Observations on the Cases of the Patients who are in the Hospital during the time of delivering the Lectures; and those cases will be selected which afford most room for instruction. They will also be classed in such a manner as will serve best to illustrate the nature of the disease under consideration. Particular notice will be taken of the distinguishing symptoms of a case. A pathological enquiry will be attempted, concerning the cause of the morbid appearances. Some short history will be given of similar cases. The probable termination will be pointed out under the form of prognosis. The indications of cure will be laid down from the most approved practice. And if an operation be found necessary, every circumstance concerning it will be explained—the different modes of performing it related—the reasons assigned for preferring the one which is employed—and the discretion made clear by the exhibition of the best surgical instruments.

In an hospital which contains so many patients, every season affords instances of the most important surgical cases. It is impossible to say before-hand what those will be; but last year there was an opportunity to consider Scrophulous Cancer, Gangrene, separation of Mortified Parts, Diseases of Bones, Exfoliation, Necrosis, Compound Fracture, Dislocation of Joints, White Swelling of Knee, Morbus Coxarius, Lumbar Abscess, Injuries of the Head, Stones in the Bladder of Urine, Hernia, Fistula, Hemorrhage, Emphysema, Stricture of Urethra, Scirrhus Testiculi, Amputation, Typhoid, Catarrh, Catarrh, Trepan, Fistula Ani, Perforation of Peritæum, Reduction of Luxations, and of Hernia, besides other subjects of less moment.

The Course will begin on the last day of October, to continue four months, at the rate of Two Lectures a week. Each Pupil to pay Two Guineas.

County of Wigton.

A Numerous and respectable Meeting of the Freeholders of the county of Wigton, held at Wigton, the 2d day of October 1787, were unanimously of opinion, That the present state of the election laws for Scotland are upon very improper footing, and require reformation, and having entered a resolution to that purpose upon their record, they requested the Convener to call a meeting as soon as possible, of all the land-owners in the county, that the subject might be taken under consideration.

In consequence of the above, the Honourable Patrick Milland of Freugh, Convener for the county, hereby intimates, That a meeting is to be held at Glenclive, upon Tuesday the 13d day of October current, to take the present state of election laws for Scotland under consideration; when all the heritors in the county of Wigton are required to attend.

Teste Printer of the Caledonian Mercury. S. R.

WHILE your correspondents are disputing on who has, or who has not, right to kill game, when the solution of the question is but the concern of a few, I beg indulgence of a corner of your paper, on a subject which concerns the much greater bulk of the public. I mean the payment of taxes, but more especially the taxes on turnpike roads, which fall to the lot of almost every traveller now to pay.

When taxes are levied to make good roads, or to repair bad ones, the burden is generally borne with cheerfulness, especially if the tax is equally laid; but when we see almost every county running to Parliament with turnpike bills, as if a taxing mania, (to use a fashionable phrase) had seized the land, since the new public taxes. One is naturally led to think, that these Gentlemen, however much they may have clamoured against the late load of new taxes, are yet industrious to furnish a needy Minister with further modes of taxing, which the present rumour of war may probably give him an opportunity to seize. And, indeed, it may so happen, that turnpikes in the hands of government, with a liberal attention to the repairs of the roads, may be a much more tolerable burden, and more agreeable to the public, than the crude, indigested turnpike bills, which are every session hurried into Parliament by party humour, where one side of a county is probably taxed to relieve the other, or, perhaps, to please the leader of a party. And here I have in view, Mr Printer, a late turnpike bill, lately printed and dispersed, and now advertised to be introduced to Parliament, for the county of Stirling.

This bill certainly falls under the character above given: for, besides other exceptional clauses, the leading principle seems to be, to tax the east and south sides of the county for a convenience to the other parts.

The town of Stirling and its environs appear to be the favoured place in this new bill.—For, besides having the best roads in the country from that town to the north and west, by the military ways, maintained at the public expence, they had the roads made from the east and south to their gate, with only one turnpike around the town, and that with favourable exemptions from paying toll upon coal, lime, or stones for building, &c. in the former act. But in the new bill, they must be exempt from every toll whatever, with the best roads in the kingdom to every quarter, maintained by the public; and the easterly part of the county, of naturally deep soil and bad roads, especially the carles, and almost destitute of materials to repair roads, must be additionally loaded with turnpikes to relieve the rest.

For when they remove the turnpike gate from Stirling to the east of St Ninian's, according to the new bill, the whole county west and north of that direction will have no toll, whereas to pay, nor any southward for ten or twelve miles, enjoying, at same time, the best of roads; whilst any person travelling from the eastward of the toll at Falkirk, must pay no less than three turnpikes before he can get into the town of St Ninian's, not exceeding ten miles.—But the most striking partiality in the new bill is, while no toll gates are to be erected westward of the east end of St Ninian's, yet nine or ten miles of additional road from Stirling to Loanhead are to be laid upon the turnpike funds, without any toll to support it. In short, the principle of this new bill are so glaringly partial, that I trust the Gentlemen of the county at large (particularly those immediately affected by it) will at the ensuing meeting attend to have a proper bill framed on equitable principles, of having the county equally taxed, and equally benefited by the public roads.

I am, Your constant reader. Stirlingshire, 9th. 11. 1787. A FREEHOLDER.

FROM THE LONDON PAPERS, Oct. 10.

Hague, Oct. 4. On the 2d instant, the Committee of the Worshipful Council of the city of Amsterdam laid the following articles before Mess. Van Spanboek, Van Blockland, Vander Goes, Van Teylingen, Van Straten and Royer, the Committee of their Noble and High Mightinesses the States of Holland, as terms for delivering up Amsterdam:

Article 1. A proper influx of the people to be allowed.

Art. 2. The Schuttery, or Militia, shall keep their arms as usual.

Art. 3. That the present Regents, and all the officers, shall remain in their respective employments.

Art. 4. That the city shall be freed from all garrisons, or the quartering of troops.

Art. 5. That the publication with respect to Orange cockades, &c. shall not be published in Amsterdam; neither shall they be wore, to prevent the excess which would certainly result therefrom.

Art. 6. That all persons, as well politic as military, who have retired into this city or in other places, and who served to cover this city, or that have taken protection of the city, shall not be molested or disturbed in their persons or goods, and in which must be comprised all those persons who were employed in the city or state commission.

To which their Noble Mightinesses' Committee answered, viz.

That a State commission to the 1st article being laborious, the report of it must be postponed.

To the 2d, That all the lawful Schuttery may keep their arms, if of use to the city.

To the 3d, It cannot be granted, as striking against the resolutions of their Noble Mightinesses of the 22d of September, whereby the removals were declared forcible and unlawful, and ordered that every thing be reinstated.

To the 4th, That this, according to the satisfaction given to Amsterdam in the year 1578, may be granted.

To the 5th, This may be granted, provided that no one, with respect to wearing of Orange colours, be molested.

To the 6th, The Committee of their Noble Mightinesses can say nothing to it, being a matter of the satisfaction his Prussian Majesty requires on behalf of her Royal Highness.

The foregoing being declared the ultimatum of the States of Holland, the acting Regents at Amsterdam, on Wednesday evening at five o'clock, issued the following

PLACARD.

"The Burgomasters and Counsellors of the city of Amsterdam find themselves obligated to declare to the good citizens, that they have always endeavored, with all their conscience, to act conformable to the great advantage of their dear country in general, and especially for this city and its inhabitants; and that still, in the present situation, the welfare of the city and its inhabitants is more precious to them than their own lives, or the preservation of their honorable employments or their properties.

"The pressing and menacing danger, and the short time which was with difficulty allowed them for deliberation, not having permitted them to impart a full knowledge to the citizens of what passed; for this reason, and for preserving this good city from more accumulated evils that are impending over our heads, they find themselves forced to grant the points required by the other members of the States of Holland; and to order Messieurs the Deputies of this city to agree to all the demands, if they cannot do otherwise, even the dismissal of the established Regents, rather than hazard that this city and its citizens should suffer further injuries; in addition to those which they have been eventually exposed to; and to risk, after suffering those injuries, to be forced at last to consent to these pretensions, and may be, to yield to demands still more oppressive. They take God to witness, from whom nothing can be concealed, and the oath which they took on entering the magistracy, that they have no other view, in granting all, than the prevention of the certain and irreparable ruin of the city.

"Since they must yield up and grant everything, they will at least endeavor to preserve the peace and the security of this populous city; for which purpose they confidently expect, that the brave Burgesses, who hitherto have acted with so much zeal in their laudable efforts, will, with the same zeal, maintain and insure the public tranquillity in this city, and preserve every individual whatever from all violence and oppression.

Done the 3d October 1787.
H. N. HASSELAER, Sec.
[The city surrendered the next day, last Thursday.]

Hague, Oct. 4. On account of the happy event which has taken place here, his Excellency Sir James Harris, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty, gave last Friday at his hotel (which was elegantly illuminated on the occasion) a grand ball and supper, which his Serene Highness the Prince of Orange, her Royal Highness the Princess, and their illustrious children honoured with their presence, as well as a great number of persons of distinction. The assembly was very numerous and brilliant.

Leeuwarden, Sept. 25. Last Friday we learned that every thing was in a terrible disorder at Franeker, and the Sunday following that they had abandoned the city. Mr Byna declared to the Regency, that the promised succours would not come, that the people refused to defend it any longer, and that there was no money, and advised them to deliver it up without the authority of the States. In the evening this declaration was repeated, adding, that they had better decamp. The Chiefs assembled, prepared and loaded the carriages, to set off under an escort of 60 auxiliaries, forced the gate, and went out of the city in spite of the citizens, who opposed them. Amongst a great number of fugitives they remarked, that Mr de Beer, the Commander in Chief, saved himself, with his mistress behind him, on a horse harnessed to a piece of cannon; they fired on every side, but by particular good luck no one was wounded.

Four companies of the regiment of Orange Nassau, and a detachment of cavalry, were sent from this place to Franeker to occupy provisionally the city, and to re-establish tranquillity. They pretend that most of the chiefs having retired to Makkum, are embarked there, but where they are going is not known. Mr de Beer is, they say, at Stavoren, where he is resolved to defend himself.

Vienna, Sept. 22. The Emperor has given orders for his field equipage to be got ready, as he means to go with the army himself.

The Emperor having been informed of some misdemeanors committed by the late farmers, to the prejudice of the revenue, has taken the resolution to take from the persons of some of them a million of florins, and has given the informer a proportionable reward. It is proposed to make a new tax on houses, in addition to the present.

A strong report prevails here, that the Tartars have sailed a number of Russian unexpectedly, and that the Turkish fleet have surprised and burnt a number of the Empress of Russia's ships.

To obviate any difficulties during the absence of the Emperor with the army, his Majesty has invited the Grand Duke of Tuscany, his brother, to come to Vienna, where he will be declared Co-Regent of the Austrian Monarchy.

Our army is composed of 72,920 men; and another army of observation is ordered of 90,940 men; these preparations have much disquieted some of our neighbours, and France has given orders for an army to be ready to march by the 1st of November towards Alsace.

L O N D O N, — Oct. 10.

There is to be a levee at St. James's this day at noon, which is expected to be numerous. No council is yet summoned to meet.

Some dispatches were sent off yesterday from Whitehall, by one of the travelling messengers to Falmouth, to be put on board the packet bound to Lisbon, for the Hon. Mr Walpole, his Majesty's Envoy to the court of Portugal.

Yesterday morning some dispatches were received from Quebec, which are dated as recent as the 10th of August. They contain an account of the arrival there of a great many ships from London, Newfoundland, &c. and that trade began to be pretty brisk.

Mr Grenville has been scarcely three days in London, and is preparing to set off again. The Court of Orange is said to be the place of his visit, on a particular embassy to the Prince and Princess of Orange.

Mr Grenville's arrival has brought nothing decisive respecting Cherbourg; but pacific professions on every account have been made at Versailles. The French allege that their object is alone to make it a commercial port; on the other hand, the allegations of England are, that it is intended to secure to them a naval force in the narrow seas. The particulars of Mr Grenville's negotiation have been laid before his Majesty, who has highly approved his conduct.

The Duke of Dorset, we learn, embarked at Dover on Sunday morning, and by Tuesday, in all probability, will be in Paris;—by Saturday next, dispatches may be expected from him.

Our armament will of course go on, and for this reason:—Great Britain is pledged to Prussia to support the Prince of Orange's standard; and while a single man in Holland is hostile to his Highness, we cannot disarm; or our claims upon his Prussian Majesty, as well as the Stadtholder, fall to the ground.

Of a war with France there is little probability; they are ill-prepared and unwilling—and must acquiesce in the demands of England. All Paris is terror-struck, that we should arm—so immediately after the signing of the AMICABLE Treaty.

The Duke of Dorset, return to Paris wears a pacific appearance, as it is pretty certain his Grace's going back to his embassy was not fully determined till Mr Grenville's dispatches arrived on Friday evening.

Yesterday, dispatches passed the Seat of Office for Mr Walpole, his Majesty's Ambassador Plenipotentiary to her Most Faithful Majesty, the Queen of Portugal, which were sent off to Falmouth, to be forwarded by the packet to Lisbon.

Mr Eden had not left Paris when the last advices came away; but his departure will take place soon after the arrival of the Duke of Dorset, when he takes a formal leave of the Court of Versailles, and sets off for Madrid, in which capital, he may be expected to arrive by the end of the month.

Sir Robert Boyd has resigned his Lieutenant-Governorship of Gibraltar, and Major General O'Hara has that command, and is now resident at that garrison.

The scarcity of water, and the dearth of all kinds of provision, which are circumstances already distressing to the inhabitants of Amsterdam, render every idea of resisting madness. And accordingly although they had not opened the gates when the last accounts came away, it appears by the placard published by the Magistrates that they were about to do it, with as good a grace as possible.

The Princess of Orange, as an indispensable condition in the submission required of the city of Amsterdam, insists, that the magistrates whom the names as the authors and instigators of the affront offered to her, be dismissed from their offices.

The persons on whose dismissal the Princess insists are fourteen in number, of whom Van Berkel stands at the head.

The Ordinary of the Navy, as made up to the beginning of the present month, consists of 98 ships of the line—12 of 50 guns, 61 frigates, and 45 others.

Orders are sent to the Admiralty Office, for a list to be laid before the cabinet, of all the King's ships now in commission, with their several stations and conditions, according to the latest returns made to the board, up to the 8th instant.

Whatever may be the result of Mr Grenville's expedition, of the nature of which we can only conjecture, one thing is certain, the French have already abandoned their design of assisting the Dutch against the Stadtholder; and when the ferment raised by the French faction in Holland has cooled, it is presumable the Dutch will be allied again to that no permanent friendship is to be expected from France.

The buzz about 'Change on Monday was pleasant enough to those not concerned with the ups and downs of the stocks.—"So Mr Grenville's come five minutes past nine."—"No, no, it was just mistaken," cries a third, "for my paper says a minutes past nine."—"Well, and what has he brought?"—"Why, I can't tell,"—"But what does he say?"—"Really I don't know."—"What are the French to do?"—"That is not known yet."—"But are we to have a war?"—"I hope not."—"So then you do not know?"—"No, I am told it's all peace."—"Aye, so I always thought."—"Did you?"—"I don't think so."—"Things look very black."—"The Drummonds told out, and we shall have a war," &c. &c. &c.

Our politicians are rather premature in hailing the Stadtholder, "Thou shalt be King hereafter." A greater accession of power will undoubtedly be made to his office, and this the House of Orange have always grasped at, but "to the King stands not within the prospect of belief."

The present form of government in the United Provinces is so miserably calculated for war, being a system of such delay as is incompatible with the necessary dispatch in cases of emergency, that the Dutch, after having deposed their Stadtholders, have always been obliged to elect another, with fear of this power, in the case of the Dutch navy during the last war, was the first cause of the unpopularity of the Stadtholder, and to this source all subsequent events to the present time are to be traced. Whether that affair was ever cleared up, future historians will find some difficulty to determine.

Although it has been customary to denounce the Dutch in the present crisis, those who are not led by popular clamour, and have reviewed the disputes from the beginning, will find that although the Stadtholder upon the whole is right, the patriots have not been altogether wrong.

The coolness and hesitation of the Russian Court has been for some time apparent, in their not renewing the Treaty of Commerce with us, which expired in 1784, and continues now only ad libitum. The Empress being now involved in a war, which will require her to be perfectly disengaged from misunderstandings with any other Court, must operate in our favour. This is obvious, that it is currently reported at Paris and Constantinople, that Sir Robert Ainslie is at the bottom of the late decisive step taken by the Porte. For this, however, we have only report.

A report was current yesterday morning, that the Russian fleet from Azoph had entered the Black Sea, and that there had been an engagement between them and the Ottomans: that Oczakow, a port near the Black Sea, is besieged, but no particulars farther. This intelligence was in general circulation, and supposed to be a fact.

It is in contemplation to raise four Roman Catholic regiments in Ireland, which are to be officered by gentlemen of the same communion. Barristers and attorneys also, of that persuasion, are to be admitted to plead and practise in the Courts of Justice in that kingdom. The scheme is equally liberal and politic, and meets the approbation of every enlightened mind.

Should a war take place between England and her Gallic neighbours, it would be an event highly popular in this country, but greatly the reverse in France, where the policy of that cabinet is reproached in terms unusually strong, and with a freedom of speech at which the subjects of its despotic monarch would once have shuddered. They affect that they had all their foundation in wars undertaken solely to gratify that insatiable thirst of ambition which has been the characteristic trait of their monarchs; and in the pursuit of which, the happiness of the people has been wholly disregarded.

A fort, to mount 12 guns, is ordered to be immediately built at Yarmouth, and the proper officers are appointed to superintend it.

PRESS WARRANTS.

Reports of the following circumstances were yesterday current in the city:—

On Monday, Lord Howe called upon the Lord Mayor, but the Lord Mayor was not in town.

When the Lord Mayor heard of it, he sent a note to Lord Howe, informing his Lordship, that he (the Lord Mayor) would wait upon his Lordship at the Admiralty, at half after eleven yesterday.

Yesterday, at half after eleven, the Lord Mayor went to the Admiralty, and in a few minutes saw Lord Howe, also the Lord Chancellor, Mr Pitt, &c.

At this interview it came out, that the business with his Lordship was, To desire the Lord Mayor to back the press warrants for the city. The Lord Mayor doubted their legality, and hinted his opinion, whether in the present early stage of war there could be a necessity for them.

Upon which the Lord Chancellor said, that his Lordship might be a very good tradesman, but he was not a politician; that he (as Lord Chancellor) was to judge of the necessity, and as to the warrants he pronounced them to be legal.

The Lord Mayor acknowledged the great weight of the opinion, but before he gave an answer to the request which had been made to him, desired to have time allowed him.

The Lord Chancellor observed, that his Lordship might take the opinion of the Recorder upon the subject.

The Lord Mayor replied, that he was very unhappy, in the Recorder being out of town at present.

Lord Howe said, that many seamen had taken refuge in the city.

The Lord Mayor answered, That if his Lordship would inform him in what part, or parts of the city, those seamen were, they should be immediately apprehended, and brought before him, or some other city magistrate; and such as were found fit and able to serve his Majesty, should be immediately sent for that purpose.

Mr Pitt said, that press warrants were legal, and withdrew.

Yesterday his Lordship summoned a Court of Aldermen, but a sufficient number did not attend to make a Court.

It is supposed that his Lordship will summon another Court.

This measure of desiring the Lord Mayor to back the press warrants, does not look like the slackening the operations of war.

When Alderman Crosby was Lord Mayor, the Ministry of that day desired him to back the press warrants. And they also said, that those warrants were legal. But he did not chuse to take their word for it; and had the opinions of Mr Dunning, Mr Wedderburne, and Sergeant Glynn regularly taken.

And he went to the late Lord Chatham upon the subject.

But none of these great authorities called them legal; they only talked of necessity, whenever the safety of the State required it, &c.

The Lord Mayor has very judiciously ordered, that all idle disorderly people be immediately apprehended by the peace officers, and brought before him, or some other of the city magistrates, to be dealt with according to law.

This is acting with great prudence and caution. The measure tends to clear the city of all improper people; of all such as are the true objects of the law, for apprehension and correction.

The Magistrate thus acting up to his duty, executes the most exemplary service to the public, as well as faithfully discharges his trust to those who have placed their protection in his hands.

Speculation has done more mischief in the Alley on the Dutch business, since the late commencement of hostilities in Holland, than has been known for many years. Hundreds have been, and thousands will be ruined by that system of stock-jobbing swindlers who have so long disgraced society.

Letters from France, by the last mail, advise, that their High Mightinesses have formally notified by their Ambassador at Paris, to the French Court, the following resolutions:—"That the troubles between that Province and the Prince Stadtholder, having been happily terminated, and his Serene Highness re-established in all his dignities, that therefore, the satisfaction demanded relative to the impeded journey of the Princess of Orange, would also be immediately arranged with the King of Prussia; that consequently there being no more enemies in the country, the resolution of the 10th of September (to demand succours from France) ceased to have its effect; that their Noble and Great Mightinesses thought they ought to give notice of this as soon as possible, to his Most Christian Majesty, not doubting that he would take such interest in this happy re-establishment of the tranquillity of the country, which he had ever shewed in striving to settle discord, and promote the prosperity of the nation; to which end the affection of his Majesty would always be acceptable to them." A decisive blow thus to the insidious intrigues of the French Court, and a total dissolution of the unnatural treaty lately formed between France and the Dutch.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, Oct. 4.

"On Tuesday last, the States of Holland and West Friesland deliberated upon a proposition made by the deputies of the town of Hoorn, tending to have every improper and opprobrious article on the registers erased, that his Royal Highness the Stadtholder might appear with honour at the Assembly; a resolution was entered into accordingly by their Noble and Grand Powers for that purpose."

A private letter from Amsterdam says, that in the attack on that city on Monday the 1st instant, "the Amsterdammers were obliged to retire into the city, with the loss of 600 men killed, and that the matter would certainly be settled, and the city given up the next morning, or an assault would be made upon it."

"Whilst the Prussian attack was going on, the Regency of Amsterdam received an answer to their dispatches, requesting assistance from the Court of France; in which the French King tells them, 'That they are not to expect any troops to be sent to them at present, because the States at the Hague have informed him that the unhappy differences in the provinces were settled, which he was glad to hear; and the more so, as at the present crisis he could not have made any considerable detachment of troops to act in their favour.'

Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, Oct. 4.

"We are not yet in a state to give a circumstantial account of the blockade of this great city; but, however, I have sent you the following short notes, copied verbatim:—

NOTE from the Duke of Brunswick, delivered to the four Commissioners of the town of Amsterdam, who were sent to his Highness to agree on the satisfaction to be given the Princess of Orange.

"The satisfaction which his Prussian Majesty demands as his right, as you must understand, Gentlemen, is entirely conformable to the articles announced in the last memorial of M. de Thulemeyer."

"All the other members, States of the province, are ready to give this satisfaction, and are in expectation of your concurrence. The moment that you have consented, by your Deputies to the States, I shall consider my commission as terminated, and the King's troops will immediately quit the neighbourhood of your town, and the adjacent places. You know too well, Gentlemen, the sentiments of her Royal Highness the Princess of Orange, to doubt that she would rather pass over many things than expose your town to troublesome inconveniences."

CHARLES, Reining Duke of Brunswick-Luneburg.

Leymsyden, Sept. 27. 1787.

"After the return of the four Commissioners, the Town Council sent two Magistrates to the Hague, to offer to give her Royal Highness a particular satisfaction, such as the four Commissioners had proposed in a plan to the Duke of Brunswick; but it appears by the following note, sent to the Town Council, that the Duke only granted an armistice of twenty-four hours."

"I regard the truce as expired this evening between seven and eight o'clock, the time when Messieurs the Deputies will be returned to Amsterdam. I am firmly resolved to proceed in the execution of my orders, unless I receive a letter from her Royal Highness the Princess of Orange, by which she denotes, that she desires no further satisfaction, and intercedes to recall the troops."

CHARLES, Reining Duke of Brunswick-Luneburg.

Sept. 30. 1787.

Extract of a letter from Frankfurt, Sept. 29.

"We learn from Berlin, that they have received advice of Sweden having declared war against Russia; and letters from Hamburg appear to confirm this report."

WIND AT DEAL, Oct. 9. S. W.

EDINBURGH.

TO THE PUBLIC.

OCTOBER 12, 1787.

SEVERAL abuses having crept into the Printing Business, from the number of Apprentices bound for a time short of the legal term of seven years, and also from Apprentices breaking their indentures, to the great loss of their masters, and finding employment in distant parts of the country, where these circumstances are not known, or properly enquired into, by which the rights of both Masters and Journeymen are evidently invaded, induced the Printers of London, some time ago, to enter into a resolution, That no person serving for a shorter term than seven years, or who shall have deferred his Master before that legal term expired, shall be suffered to exercise said employment. In order to second, to the utmost of their power, so laudable a design, the Printers of Edinburgh, have entered into a similar resolution; and therefore think it a duty incumbent on them, to caution all Parents, Guardians, &c. who may wish to have their children bred to the above business, against binding them for a shorter term, otherwise they will have themselves to blame if such Apprentices are refused employment when the terms of their indentures are expired.

J. A. CAMPBELL, Clk.

On Wednesday last, the Right Honourable Lady Elbank was safely delivered of a son at Darn Hall.

Lady Hunter Blair of Dunfry was safely delivered of a daughter yesterday, at her house in Queen Street.

On Monday was married at the manse of Carstairs, Thomas Babington, Esq; of Ruthy Temple, Leicestershire, to Miss Jean Macaulay, daughter of the Rev. Mr John Macaulay.

Miss Isabella Gordon, youngest daughter of the late Sir Alexander Gordon of Lesmoir, Bart. died here on Wednesday last.

Last Wednesday evening, 10th October, died at Greenock, Miss M. A. E. Hamilton, daughter of the late Gilbert Hamilton, Esq; of Westburn.

It is said Government have bought up all the hemp in Russia, in order to prevent its getting into the hands of foreign powers.

Yesterday, a carrier was brought before the Magistrates, for keeping up money that he had got to deliver to a merchant in the city, when they ordered him instantly to jail, till he should return the money and pay the costs. And as complaints of a similar nature have been of late but too frequent, we understand that they are determined to check, by an exemplary and more severe punishment, the first carrier that shall be convicted before them of a like offence.

Thursday night, was committed to the tolbooth, by warrant of the Sheriff, Iobal Stalker, fellow-servant with Janet Rannie, the woman who was found dead on Wednesday morning, with a deep cut on the back part of her head, as mentioned in our last. From a pre-cognition taken before the Sheriff, and other circumstances, there is reason to suspect, that the unfortunate woman was murdered by a wound from some sharp instrument, and that Stalker was the perpetrator, or accessory to the murder.

On Wednesday the Synod of Fife met at Dunfermline, and was opened with an excellent sermon by the Reverend Mr Moodie at Kirkcaldy, the former moderator, when the Reverend Mr Spence junior, at Orwell, was chosen Moderator. Mr Ferguson having withdrawn his appeal, there was no business before them. — And, same day, the Presbytery of Edinburgh having convened pro re nata, and finding no obstacle to the settlement of Mr Moodie, appointed Thursday se'night for his admission to the church and parish of St Andrew's in this city; and ordered the Reverend Mr William Martin, minister of the parish of the New Greyfriars, to preach and preside on the occasion.

On Wednesday arrived in Leith roads his Majesty's ship Racehorse.

The Champion frigate is sailed for the Nore, with impressed men.

We hear from Greenock, that the impress is so hot on the Clyde, that no vessel escapes. Fishing is entirely given up. A few days ago there were about four hundred boats employed in the herring fishing, and herrings sold so low as eight pence per hundred. Now there is scarce a boat to be seen in that employment; and the few that are caught fell at the rate of two shillings and sixpence and three shillings per hundred. In the Highlands all the crews have deserted the buffes; so that this valuable branch of business is in danger of being totally abandoned, unless government think proper to grant protections.

On the 14th ult. the Committee of Burghesses of Aberdeen wrote a letter to the Magistrates, requesting them to lay the public accounts of that burgh before them. The Magistrates immediately ordered the public accounts to be laid before the Burghesses for their inspection. Mr Ewen, Secretary to the Convention of Reform, sent a letter of thanks to the Magistrates for their attention and politeness. If the Town Councils in Scotland were to follow the example of the Magistrates of Aberdeen, it would be very honourable to themselves, and satisfactory to the public.

The Grand Jury of the General Quarter Sessions of the peace for the county of Cumberland, on Wednesday last, certified the prices of grain to be as follows, viz.

Wheat, (by the Quarter)	L. 2 8 6
Rye, do.	1 12 6
Oats, do.	0 18 0
Beans, do.	1 14 0
Barley, do.	1 4 6

The ports are open for all the above articles: — No return was made of malt or grey peas.

At these sessions, there were no prisoners to try, nor no appeals were made. The chief of the business was four travellers, and four poor petitions, with some presentments of high roads. This, it is hoped, is an early proof of the good effects produced by the several parts of the present laudable plan of reform, which it is the interest of every good man to assist.

Extract of a letter from York, Oct. 12.

"His Royal Highness the Duke of York arrived at his domain, at Allerton Mailverer, on Sunday evening; and on Tuesday morning was waited upon by the Sheriffs of this city, who were deputed by the Lord Mayor and Corporation to congratulate his Royal Highness, in their name, on his arrival."

"His Royal Highness received the Sheriffs with the utmost politeness and attention; and they had the honour to kiss his Royal Highness's hand."

"A gold box, of the value of one hundred pounds, is preparing, by order of the Corporation, in which the freedom of this city is intended to be presented to his Royal Highness."

"We are informed from good authority, that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is expected to arrive at Allerton Mailverer on Monday next."

Extract of a letter from Dumfries, Oct. 11.

"At the Michaelmas Head Court of this county, held hereupon the 2d inst. the Meeting being unanimously of opinion, that it is a most desirable object to obtain an alteration of the present laws with regard to freehold qualifications in Scotland, and being informed, that there was a plan in agitation for that purpose, appointed Lord Ellick, Charles Sharpe of Hoddum, Robert Dalziel of Glenae, Robert Riddell of Glenriddel, Alexander Ferguson of Craigdarroch, William Copland of Collieston, Patrick Miller of Dalwhinton, John Maxwell of Terraghty, James Stewart Monreith of Clofburn, George Maxwell of Carruchan, George Hogan of Waterfield, James Carruthers of Wormanby, and George Johnston of Cowhill, Esquires, a committee of their number to meet at Edinburgh with any committees that may be named by the other counties of Scotland upon this business; and particularly to meet and correspond with any committee named by the Gentlemen of the Stewartry of Kirkcubright for that purpose; and appointed Mr Ferguson of Craigdarroch to be convener of the Committee; and they recommended it to the committee always to have it in view, that the abolition of life-rent and wadset qualifications, and a reduction of the extent of the present qualification by valuation of 400 l. Scots, are particular objects to be attended to in any new law to be brought into Parliament upon this business."

Extract of a letter from Kelfo, Oct. 12.

"On Wednesday night we had a violent storm of wind, accompanied with a very heavy fall of rain, in consequence of which, the Tweed and Tiviot were yesterday so much swelled as to stop all communication, even by boats, from Kelfo to that part of the country which lies between those rivers; and we are sorry to add, that great quantities of corn were carried off from the haugh lands."

"Mr John Knox surveyed the river Tweed from Kelfo to Berwick, and is of opinion, that an inland navigation to Coldstream would greatly enrich the country, and be practicable to Kelfo. He declared himself much delighted with the face of the country, on both sides of the river; and that in all his travels he never beheld towns better situated for different manufactures than Kelfo, Coldstream, and Berwick. He was much surprised at the shameful neglect of the harbour of Berwick."

Extract of a letter from Haddington, Oct. 12.

"Last Monday evening, Donald Gaw, about 20 years of age, having on a blue coat and striped vest, Smith his wife, and Janet Miller, who says she is married to one Campbell, were apprehended here, and lodged in prison, on suspicion of having stolen goods from a shop in Musselburgh. In their quarters were found two bundles, containing silk handkerchiefs, ribbons, a bit or two of muslin, and two wet shirts marked W. P. Campbell was also in town, but on hearing of his companions being apprehended, set off, leaving behind him his bundle and a light drab great coat. The two women have wine-coloured mantles, and were going through the shops looking at ribbons, silk stockings, and mullins, and seem to be noted offenders."

Surgeon's Hall, Edin. Oct. 11. 1787.

In presence of the Royal College of Surgeons, appeared Mr James Robertson, son of Collector Alexander Robertson at Inverness, and late apprentice to Mr Alexander Wood, who being examined upon his skill in Surgery and Pharmacy, was found fully qualified to practise these arts. Extracted by ALEX. GRANT, for MR WILLIAM BALDWIN, Clk.

On Thursday last the celebrated Dr Katterfelto delivered his first Lecture in Mr Dunn's long-room, New Town, which gave general satisfaction to a very genteel audience. A correspondent observes, that the Doctor's performance far exceeded general expectation; and he has no doubt of his being well attended during his stay here, by the nobility and gentry of this city and neighbourhood, as he seems to possess a very considerable degree of merit in the line of his profession.

On seeing Dr KATTERFELTO'S Grand Exhibition.

For thee did Science all her depths explore,
Imparting knowledge never known before:
By thee explain'd Philosophy we trace,
From orb to orb, and range ethereal space,
The laws of motion, gravitation, fire,
Of all the powers that to instruct inspire:
The world's great theory arm'd we scan,
The glorious end of Heaven's peculiar plan.
To furnish wisdom, to improve the mind,
Must be an indulgent parent and design'd.
The curious and accomplish'd, and in you:
No low device has furnish'd yet your name,
Foremost amidst the experienced sons of Fame:
Your secret force of elemental fire,
Untaught before, e'en Science must admire:
All that the world has call'd its secret wonders
Are now display'd, with lightning, earthquakes, thunders,
Opticks in all its varied beauties shine,
The eye's formation, mechanism divine,

Are all brought down to common observation;

In others what we lose, in thee we find.

Another Proof of the amazing Power of Medicine.
To Mr. SPILSBURY, Chymist, Soho Square, London.
S. R. Sept. 28. 1787.

Some time since, I had the misfortune to fall down, and bruise my right leg, which brought on a violent rheumatic humour all over it. For about a twelvemonth I made trial of various medicines, in order to effect a cure, but in vain. So far were they from improving the wheeled-for purpose, that the humour continued to increase daily, inasmuch as to confine me to my bed for five weeks, and to make me apprehend very serious consequences. At length I had the good fortune to take your drops, and, to my great satisfaction, I now assert, that when I had used but one large bottle, I found myself much benefited; and that about three bottles more cured me. I am, Sir, &c.

JOHN ROBINSON, Printer,

By Authority of his Majesty's Letters Patent,
ETHEREAL ANODYNE SPIRIT,

Prepared by the Proprietor and Inventor, WILLIAM TICE-
KELL, Apothecary and Chymist, of the City of Bath.

THIS Medicine has great efficacy in all diseases of the Stomach. It strengthens its tone, creates appetite, promotes digestion, expels flatulence, and quiets pain. It is a most powerful remedy in the Gout in the Stomach, in Cramps, Spasms, Hysterical and Hypochondriacal Complaints; and in violent gouty attacks may be administered as an Anodyne, with the greatest safety.

It has equal virtues in many diseases of the Breast, as the Asthma, Hooping Cough, and all other Coughs unattended with inflammation; and in Hectical Habits, it perhaps more efficaciously relieves that cough which is the forerunner of a consumption, than any other medicine. But its peculiar excellence is in the cure of that dreadful and generally fatal disease, the DROPSY of the BREAST; and there is every reason to conclude, from its hitherto successful exhibition, that it has specific virtues in that disorder. It has also been found to be a valuable success, in the Anasarca, as well as the Ascites, or Dropsy of the Belly; and is probably the most certain Diuretic hitherto discovered.

The Etheral Anodyne Spirit, and Specific Pills for the Dropsy, are sold, by appointment of the proprietor, at Mr Newberry's, No. 45, St. Paul's Church Yard; by Mr. Crutwell, at his printing-office in Bath; and by Mr. N. R.
CHEYNE, bookseller, St. Andrew's Street, New Town.

The Etheral Anodyne Spirit is sold retail in bottles of 7 s. and 3 s. 6 d. each, stamp-duty included. The Specific Pills for the Dropsy, in boxes of 2 s. 6 d. duty included.

N. B. The virtues of this Medicine are further illustrated in a Treatise which is just published, price 2 s.

house of John Rutherford vintner in Perth, The whole FISHINGS in the River Tay, belonging to John Hay Balfour, Esq. of Llys, are to be let by public roup, for a number of years to commence at the ensuing fishing season.

These fishings are of great extent, stretching along the fourth side of the River, betwixt the lands of Carpow, and the Pow of Lindores, being about a mile and an half in length, and by reason of Mugdrum Island lying in the middle of the river, and running nearly the same length as above, the hawling places are double to those on the land side.
The fishermen can haul their nets on the land side, and on both sides of the island. They have employed upwards of twenty boats in a season, and great numbers of salmon have been caught, there.

The shore of Newburgh lies on the side of these fishings, and a cellar for preserving ice could be made at a small expence in the back brew of Mugdrum, having a north exposure, and lying also contiguous to the fishings. These circumstances must be of great convenience and advantage to such as would send the Salmon fresh to the London market; and a vessel generally in every eight or ten days sails from Newburgh for London.

Any person inclining to make a private bargain, may give in their proposals betwixt and the day of roup, to the pro-
